

I chose this type of copyright because I would like for people to be able to build off of my work. I also learned a lot of new writing styles from other authors. I learned that what you read plays a massive role in the way you write. All authors have their own style and also share styles with other authors. For example, if you ever had been hoodwinked or in a pickle you are quoting Shakespeare. If you can't understand what I'm saying and tell me "it's Greek to me," you are quoting Shakespeare. You see people write their own ideas but use a hint of someone else's. Famous authors, as well as professors use others writers help when they are writing a piece. I would love for people to be able to use my work to help them with their writing techniques. People building off each other is how new writers create their own writing techniques, and how they learn to become their own types of style. There are different styles of writing and we learned about a few of them in our lives. Every time you read something there are pick up on the different writing styles. You might not think that you pick up on the different styles but your writing changes slightly every time you read someone else's work. I do not believe that using someone else's technique or writing style is a copyright. I do however believe that you cannot copy word for word someone else's work.